Religious Studies

We follow the OCR Religious Studies A' Level syllabus. The course consists of three main components; Philosophy of Religion, Ethics and Development of Christian Thought. Over the summer there are a number of things that you should do to prepare yourself for starting the course in September. Below are also some suggestions of additional reading and research that you could do.

Background reading: There is lots to choose from when preparing to study Religious Studies. One of the books below would provide some background understanding and awareness of some of the key ideas and scholars that you will encounter. Alternatively, there are a number of excellent podcasts and YouTube channels that could offer a fantastic start for your studies. The starred books are those that will give useful extension reading when you are writing essays

Books:

- 'A Little History of Philosophy' by Nigel Warburton *
- 'Sophie's World' by Jostein Gaarder
- 'God Matters' by Peter Vardy and Charlote Vardy *
- 'Ethics Matters' by Peter Vardy and Charlotte Vardy *
- 'Justice' by Michael Sandel
- 'Simply Jesus' by Tom Wright

Podcasts:

- History of Philosophy without any Gaps
- Within Reason with Alex O'Connor
- Breaking into the Habit with Father Casey

Additional online activities: Have a look at the popular online series of lectures by Harvard political philosopher Michael Sandel. The series is called 'Justice' and it explores key questions and issues in moral philosophy. Choose some that interest you and watch his lectures. Episode 1 explores the well-known 'trolley problem' that you may have heard of and which you will encounter in your first few ethics lessons.

Try some philosophy experiments on https://www.philosophyexperiments.com/. These take you through some common problems and questions in philosophy. They each pose different scenarios and require you to submit your responses to them. The first one on the list 'Should you kill the fat man?' links to the trolley problem discussed by Michael Sandel in his first lecture.

Keep up to date with the news. Many of the issues that we discuss link to current issues and debates, so keep an eye on the news as this will give you a wealth of examples that you can use. For example, issues related to the environment, sex and relationships, medical ethics, war, as well as to philosophical questions such as the problem of evil and suffering in the world.
